OBANION GIVES
SELF UP; DUFFY
UNKNOWN TO HIMWrong Man, Says Engelke
When Pair Meet.

Dean O'Banion, sought as a suspect in the Duffy-Exley murders, surrendered himself late yesterday and offered a complete denial of any charges against him.

Telephoning Assistant State's Attorney John Starbaro that he was ready to give up, he said that the prosecutor's staff would find him waiting in his florist shop in North State street. Starbaro and his investigator, Joseph Geary, took O'Banion into custody.

"I never knew John Duffy," he said. "I didn't know Orlando Horne or Freddie Curtiss, or even Bill McGuire, who says I rode away with Duffy just before he was found dead. No, I am not the man that got into the automobile with Duffy on Wabash avenue."

Not the Man, Says Engelke.
O'Banion's story apparently was verified half an hour later, when Starbaro and Assistant State's Attorney Harold Levy conducted him into the county jail to meet Engelke. The two men confronted each other for several minutes.

"If that's O'Banion, he ain't the fellow I thought he was," said Engelke. "I never met O'Banion, but I understood he was the man I saw climbing into a sedan with Duffy the night after Duffy killed Maybelle Exley. This ain't the guy, though."

The assistant prosecutors took a statement from O'Banion. It contained not his name, address, business, and a refusal to say more.

Hunt Started by Witness.

The quest for O'Banion began after Engelke, who says he was with Duffy in the apartment at 1116 Carmen avenue, when Maybelle was shot to death, told of seeing the two men meet near 11th street and Wabash avenue. At that time Duffy was anxiously seeking assistance from one of Maybelle's assistants, and Engelke understood O'Banion was going to help him out.

The two men drove away in the automobile, Engelke told the press, and the next morning Duffy's body was found in a snow bank at the southwestern edge of the city.

Engelke repeated this story last week when brought before Judge Joseph B. David, for a habeas corpus hearing. He concluded by declaring he had "nothing to do with O'Banion, was 'as good as dead'."

Recall McCarthy Angle.

With this statement in mind, and remembering Engelke's recent failure to identify the plumbers' union as one of the men he had involved in the Duffy case, the state's attorney's office attached significance to Engelke's refusal to "place the finger" on O'Banion.

HEATON SOUGHT OPERATION ON ANOTHER MAN?

Columbus, S. C., March 12.—Richard H. Heaton, who was killed in Louisville, Ky., last Saturday by William Gates, who was his companion to Louisville, was the victim of a plot. Heaton had kidnapped him and held him prisoner for the purpose of performing an operation on him. He was wanted in Lake City, S. C., for two attempted attacks similar to that on Gates, according to a special to the Columbia State from Lake City.

The attacks were attempted last November and December by Heaton, a confederate known as H. A. Rogers, and an unknown woman. The attacks were made upon a prominent citizen of Lake City.

A photograph, said to be of Frank Cordell, now under indictment in Louisville in connection with the case, said to have been identified in Lake City today as W. A. Rogers.

COUNCIL EXPERT TO SEEK LOWER
PRICE FOR MILK

Immediate downward revision of retail milk prices as the result of adjustments to be effected between farmers and local dealers' organizations on April 1, will be demanded by the council high cost of living committee, its secretary, Joseph Russek, was announced yesterday.

A truce between the producers and dealers was declared early in January after a several day's strike, when the dealers agreed to pay the farmers $1.10 a hundredweight for milk until April 1.

A flat retail price for milk is fixed at 15 cents a quart by the committee, according to a statement issued by Mr. Russek.

PARIS, March 12.—The crucial battle to determine whether Premier Poincare stands or falls will begin tomorrow when the senate begins debate on his financial reform bills.

The junior police force is organized revealed today when Henri Berenger, chairman of the senate finance committee, submitted a report on the government's scheme. The report bitterly criticized the government's failure to take action sooner and announced plainly dissatisfaction with the measures envisaged. The report says the committee, however, believes that present and future is a principal factor, especially in view of the depreciating franc.

The report starts right out with a plain statement that it rejects M. Poin-care's request for power to decree laws, pointing out that the existing constitutional measures served in other crises and the "entire administrative and financial machinery of the republic cannot be modified." Continuing it is: "It is without enthusiasm that the state accepts a 20 per cent increase in taxation which is always bad and often unjust."

The report then refuses to permit the state to lease its match industry.

DAWES EXPERTS
SOON TO REPORT

some surprise when he was excused after a little over two hours on the witness stand.

MCLEAN TESTIMONY

Mr. McLean began his testimony with a comprehensive denial of any wrongdoing in the navy oil reserve leases of acquaintances with Sinclair or Doheny, of interest in any of their companies, and of trading in any of their stocks.

"Only twice in my life," Mr. McLean said, "have I bought New York stock exchange stocks, and those stocks had nothing to do with any company involved in this controversy."

In response to a question Mr. McLean said he had nothing to add to his Palm Beach testimony about giving A. B. Fall checks for $100,000, which Fall in a few days returned unashed. The examination then proceeded:

SENATOR WALSH—Have you made search for the stub checks that you were interrogated about at that time?

MR. MCLEAN—I have searched for everything, senator.

SENATOR WALSH—Are you able to produce them?

MR. MCLEAN—No sir.

SENATOR WALSH—Where and when did you last see Secretary Fall before going to Palm Beach last December?

MR. MCLEAN—In Atlantic City, senator.

SENATOR WALSH—When was that?

MR. MCLEAN—It was very shortly before I went to Palm Beach, senator. I went at Mr. Fall's request, as he was ill.

SENATOR WALSH—Please tell us about that.

HIS ATLANTIC CITY TRIP

"I went in a private car—not that that has anything to do with it senator," Mr. McLean said. "I just want to assure you there was no secrecy about the trip—and I was let in on it by Mrs. Fall. They had the use of four rooms in a very big hotel. It was the biggest place ever seen in a hotel. And she said the secretary is asleep, and you can't wake him. He had a dreadful night."

"Well," I said, "Mrs. Fall, I have to go back in an hour and a half from now to catch the train; it is the only decent connection I can get; and I will wait as long as it can possibly be."

"I thought I would bring in the room for at least two nights, senator, before Mr. Fall finally came in. He was in a sort of a dark red sweater or smoking gown, and he had been asleep, and he was in a very nervous, bad physical condition. It didn't need a doctor to tell me that, or anything. And he talked to me for a couple of minutes and he was awfully upset. He seemed to be in a very bad condition, as I have said."

Tells of Conversation.

"But what you want to hear I will tell you now, senator," he said. "Next to remember on our check transaction of two or three years ago, I said I did. He said, 'Will you say that or do you mind saying that? I don't know the exact phraseology used—that you loaned me in that cash?' And he said one thing; he said, 'It has nothing to do with Harry Sinclair or Teapot Dome.' And now these are his exact words: 'He said, "They are barking up the wrong tree." I remember that, and I didn't know that expression before. He said, 'They are barking up the wrong tree,' and he said, 'Will you do this? I am in an embarrassing pos-

DOHENY, IN CHICAGO, SAYS HE WILL FIGHT TO PROTECT RIGHTS

Edward L. Doheny, whose naval reserve oil leases have been under investigation of a Senate committee, arrived yesterday on his way to Los Angeles "to protect his rights."

"We are going out to fight to hold our leases and to protect our rights," Mr. Doheny said. "Those fellows out there are trying to start a lot of scandal about our leases on the Teapot Dome. They read of the Washington scandal and decided to follow suit, I guess."

Mr. Doheny said he had never had any connection with Harry Sinclair.

he drew no salary, but was given a badge and a card which permitted him to pass police lines when he was with the President in a strange city. He also received a department "code" for his protection.

SENATOR WALSH—We need a little help, Mr. McLean, in deciphering some of these telegrams. Your attention has doubtless been called to the telegram of Dec. 22, 1923, sent to you by Major, in which he tells you about the private wire because, among other reasons, it would give you easy and quick access to the White House?

MR. MCLEAN—I didn't want it, senator.

Mr. McLean explained in great detail that the request for the private wire was made of the Western Union before the Teapot Dome scandal developed. He told William Wiley of the Cincinnati Enquirer to Wiley of Palm Beach. Horner has testified he really said "Easy access to Wiley at the house."

Two days before Fall wrote the committee that he got the $100,000 from McLean, the editor sent a telegram to the editor of the McLean newspaper, asking what Fall or "importunt business" was. Asked what this business was, McLean said he thought it referred to some horses he was going to ship to the Fall ranch. The examination continued.

Fall's Reply to McLean.

SENATOR WALSH—Now this is evidently the reply from Senator Fall to you: "Expect to be here. That is, Saturday. But in event of departure will wire in time to meet secretary at convenient point." What does that mean?

MR. MCLEAN—I will be darned if I know, senator.

SENATOR WALSH—In a telegram to Mr. Major, Dec. 25, you say: "Have had tip that I am to be called before the congressional investigating committee." From what source did that tip come to you?

MR. MCLEAN—Senator, if I got one tip, I can probably realize, then, that I had $100,000, about, collateral in a safe deposit vault, and I am sure that the banks would have honored my checks for $50,000 or $60,000 apiece.

SENATOR WALSH—But you made no arrangement to do so, did you?

MR. MCLEAN—No, sir, none whatever.

Fall Had the Checks.

SENATOR WALSH—And Mr. Fall had the checks?

MR. MCLEAN—Yes, sir.

SENATOR WALSH—Meanwhile you had made no provision to take care of the overdraft?

MR. MCLEAN—No, sir, he was going to tell me if he was going to cash them; I mean I understood that he would have called me up if he was going to cash them.

Applies Meant Fall.

SENATOR WALSH—And Mr. Fall had the checks?

MR. MCLEAN—Yes, sir.

SENATOR WALSH—Meanwhile you had made no provision to take care of the overdraft?

MR. MCLEAN—No, sir, he was going to tell me if he was going to cash them; I mean I understood that he would have called me up if he was going to cash them.

Applies Meant Fall.

SENATOR WALSH—And Mr. Fall had the checks?

MR. MCLEAN—Yes, sir.

SENATOR WALSH—When did you first make the acquaintance of Senator Curtis?

MR. MCLEAN—The first close acquaintance was in 1920; senator, I mean we got very intimate then.

SENATOR WALSH—What was the occasion of your forming this intimacy?

Tells of Trip to Ranch.

MR. MCLEAN—Why, we were drawn together on a trip, and we both like two or three different things very well, both of did.

SENATOR WALSH—Who were in that party?

MR. MCLEAN—O, the President, Mrs. Harding, Creager—giving you the book of my recollection, senator. I am not saying this on oath—she attorney general; Jess Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Jennings. That is about all I can remember, senator. Senator Fall met us at Brownsville. That was the extreme end of the trip. We went from Brownsville to Point Isabel where the President wanted to fish. That was about eighteen miles from there.

SERVICES AS SLEUTH

Mr. Walsh here questioned Mr. McLean in regard to his services as "special agent of the department of justice." Mr. McLean explained that he had nothing to do with Harry Sinclair or Teapot Dome. And now these are his exact words: "He said, 'They are barking up the wrong tree.' I remember that, and I didn't know that expression before. He said, 'They are barking up the wrong tree,' and he said, 'Will you do this? I am in an embarrassing pos-

this darned Teapot Dome thing. That is really the truth, senator. You can decode telegrams, you can look through them for the next year and you can never find anything dishonest I have done."

SENATOR WALSH—We need a little help, Mr. McLean, in deciphering some of these telegrams. Your attention has doubtless been called to the telegram of Dec. 22, 1923, sent to you by Major, in which he tells you about the private wire because, among other reasons, it would give you easy and quick access to the White House?

MR. MCLEAN—Yes, sir; after Mr. Walsh examined me in, Palm Beach

this darned Teapot Dome thing. That is really the truth, senator. You can decode telegrams, you can look through them for the next year and you can never find anything dishonest I have done."

SENATOR WALSH—Well, did you know that the purpose of making the statement that you had loaned Mr. Fall $100,000 in cash was intended to relieve him in some way, to help him out, on account of some embarrassment or some charges—is that true?

MR. MCLEAN—Yes, sir.

SENATOR WALSH—That is, you wanted to help Mr. Fall out?

MR. MCLEAN—I, sir, to help Mr. Fall out as far as I could as long as he told me, senator, that he never had received a nickel from Harry Sinclair or Teapot Dome. He said, "They are barking up the wrong tree." If he had told me it had been Mr. Doheny or Mr. Sinclair, I naturally would not have done it, sir, for anybody.

SENATOR WALSH—Did you ever receive any money from any person to be used in making a loan for the benefit of Mr. Fall any time?

MR. MCLEAN—Not one nickel, sir.

FIGHT OPENS AT CHEYENNE TODAY ON TEAPOT LEASE

Special U. S. Attorneys Reach Scene.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., March 13.—[By the Associated Press.]—The United States government's legal action for the annulment of the Teapot Dome naval reserve lease to Harry F. Sinclair and the Mammoth Oil company will be started with the opening of court here tomorrow morning.

Judge T. Blake Kennedy of the United States District court in Wyoming has set 10 o'clock as the hour for a preliminary hearing on the government's suit in equity, asking cancellation of the lease on the grounds of fraud and corruption.

The attorney general was gratified to learn from the committee in that connection, the statement said, that the "proceeding is an investigation and not a trial."

"Counsel for the attorney general have been under the impression for some time that he was about to be placed on trial," it added. "Headlines in the newspapers have carried certain serious but general and indefinite charges against him in his official capacity."

OTHER WOMAN'S GEMS SHINE AS WIDOW SNEERS

Belva Gaertner, Mrs. Law
Meet at Inquest.

BY GENEVIEVE CARPENTER.

For years women have been speculating on just how a wife must feel when her grief over the sudden death of her husband's death is jolted out of line by the equally abrupt revelation that he died at the hands of the woman who was not his wife.

Yesterday Mrs. Freda Law answered that question.

Set in the South Wabash avenue station, the young widow of a few hours heard a corner's fury hold Mrs. Belva Gaertner to the grand jury, charged with the murder early yesterday morning of Walter Law, 3233 Ellis avenue, Freda's "good husband" and Belva's "courteous escort."

Talk of Gin and Blood.

When they talked of gin and blood, Mrs. Law trembled as if she might faint, huddled close to her father-in-law, and tried to keep from crying. It was her grief for her dead husband, she admitted.

When they spoke of the divorcee's nocturnal visits with Law to south side cabarets; when they told of Belva's seal to "throw my arms around him and get him to talk to me," Mrs. Law pushed herself forward and sneered across the table at the older, more vivacious woman with the seven diamond rings. It was her hatred for her husband's alleged paramour that gave Mrs. Law the white hair and the quiver from North Carolina, father of the murdered automobile salesman, and the third dramatic figure about the table, steered a middle course.

For he placed a share of the blame for the tragedy on his own son, Walter, even as he praised him.

"No, daughter," he murmured again and again to the tired daughter-in-law at his side. "No, daughter, it's not that woman's fault entirely. Walter ought not to have gone out with any one. He had a lovely wife and a fine boy. No, he did wrong, and we know it."

Vaguely, some of the friends suggested that the daughter, well tutored in the things she wished, might have been unwillingly drawn away from his domestic circle. And, as a corollary to the shooting, they hummed a remark that the "modern wicked woman" is "awfully wicked."

"No, daughter," his voice was soft and stern. "no, the times aren't getting worse. Things were this way when I was a boy back in the Carolinas. But it was more quiet. A man had to stand up and fight against it. That's all."

The trial set man sites there, between the two women, an unconscious alliance wheel.

Blood Spills Best Clothes.

Mrs. Gaertner is plainly gowned. Her best cassock, with her chic white hat and her reddish green dress, are ruined with blood. So she wears a brown sport dress, a plain black coat with a fur collar, and a brown sport hat.

Seven diamond rings and a wrist watch have been washed clean of Walter Law's blood. They glint more brightly from that cleaning, as she wears her hands gleaming.

Mrs. Law, too, is plainly gowned. She spent the night before in her home sewing curtains, and that occupation doesn't call for the elaborate gown and the silver slippers that Mrs. Gaertner had to wear when she went dining and dancing with Mr. Law.

Set Waiting for Walter.

Later Tuesday night, Mrs. Law relates, "I sat up waiting for Walter. He had phoned at dinner time and asked me if I wanted to go out, but I said I had to sew. So he told me he was going to work. I waited for him. About 2 in the morning I saw a taxicab stop next door."

Colored people live there. You know. Walter's mother and father own the dead Law's down at the Nash Automobile company, has just testified that Law told him Mrs. Gaertner had threatened to kill him and that Law contemplated increasing his insurance.

For just an instant, pause. Mrs.

my door and told me my husband had been killed."

"At first," she explains. "I felt rather sorry for that other woman, because she was guilty of killing and everything."

Widow Wants No Hanging.

See her come in. She was almost staggering. O, I never knew I could hate any one so much. My friends have told me they hate the hanging. No, I don't want to have the hanging. And she shuddered as when she had seen the pistol with which her husband had been killed.

"But I don't want her to go to jail a month or two and then stop out."

Belva's story of what the friends suggested that the daughter, well tutored in the things she wished, might have been unwillingly drawn away from his domestic circle. And, as a corollary to the shooting, they hummed a remark that the "modern wicked woman" is "awfully wicked."

"No, daughter," his voice was soft and stern. "no, the times aren't getting worse. Things were this way when I was a boy back in the Carolinas. But it was more quiet. A man had to stand up and fight against it. That's all."

For just an instant, pause. Mrs.

Gaertner loses her buoyancy. Her fingers, swathed in their diamonds and sapphires, clutch her purse and her cosmetics. But a moment later she finds it easy to meet this story "the buoys."

"That's just a frameup on the part of the automobile people," she asserts. "I'll tell you the truth about that insurance. A few weeks ago, Wallie told me his wife had her fortune told and the woman warned her that her husband would die inside of seven weeks."

Law, according to Mrs. Gaertner's story, continued to her that his wife, influenced by the fortune teller, urged him to cut more insurance.

"But Wallie told her," said Belva, "that he would tie up the insurance so that his wife couldn't get a penny of it. He said he'd have it all made out for his boy."

Dennis Threatening Law.

"Me threaten him with a knife? That's crazy. He was always a courteous gentleman to me. Why should I ever be angry with him?" and she opens her large brown eyes still wider.

The inquest is over. The jurors, to the immeasurable surprise of Belva, have held her to the grand jury, charged with murder. Those who have been speculating on the feelings of a grief-stricken widow shocked at the news of her husband's infidelity, now begin to wonder, how it fails to kill a man.

Ex-Husband Threats Belva.

William Gaertner, 3227 Kinshark avenue, a wealthy manufacturer, it was revealed, purchased the expensive caucal coat which his ex-wife Belva was wearing the night of the shooting.

Mr. Gaertner, who had been divorced May 7, 1920, declared he hoped for a reconciliation "just as soon as possible." He provided her with money, a car, and a house.

At his home Mr. Gaertner admitted last night that Belva had called him on phone night, but failed to do so Tuesday night.

The ex-husband sat looking up at a full length portrait of Belva, done in the days when she was a cafe singer. He had paid, too, for the car in which Law's body was found.

During the day the Lawes found time to adjourn that Walter R. Law, bearded husband, etc., will be buried Friday, March 14, after services at the Daylight church, 47th street and St. Lawrence avenue.

ROME, March 12.—An agreement by which Italy loans $20,000,000 lire (roughly $20,000,000) to Poland was signed today. The Transcas was informed by Premier Mussolini and M. Zelowski, the Polish minister to Italy.

HOLD DIVORCEE AS SLAYER OF AUTO SALESMAN

ty-four hours before his death he confided in friends that "some day" he'd die—and probably at the hands of the woman with whom he went on drinking sprees once or twice a week.

"I believe that when Law and Mrs. Gaertner returned from the cafe she tried to make him enter her apartment," said Mr. Klarkowksi. "He was so drunk at the time she locked him in and held him there at the point of a knife, refused. Then she pulled the gun, perhaps. He tried to stop her, but couldn't."

Prior to Goodwin's testimony there had been a succession of witnesses whose stories told nothing to refute the statement of Mrs. Gaertner that "we got drunk and he got killed—I don't know how."

Then Detective Sergeant Corcoran, who arrested Mrs. Gaertner, testified, him, because he was so nice. Said she was too drunk to remember leaving the cafe—didn't know a thing, until there was a big noise and Law toppled over."

"Curley" Brown, manager of the Gingham, about whom Mrs. Gaertner said she and Law had some words because she danced with Brown, gave a touch which, some thought, was satire.

"They didn't have any gin," he said. "Just ginger ale. We don't allow gin. They didn't display any gun in the cafe—though they may have talked about one—for I've always got my eyes peeled for guns. They were such a nice couple—I'm certainly sick."

"There as people yawned and wondered if there'd be anything "hot," a detective whispered in Klarkowksi's ear.

"Bring him in quick," said the prosecutor. And ten minutes later Goodwin took the stand.

"The House of Cards."

Old-fashioned, and proud of it

Even in 23 years, there are some things in the making of candy we haven't learned.

For instance, we haven't learned how to make candy with ordinary cooking butter.

True, it's butter. But we've always said that only the best of everything is used in making these candies. And, somehow, we can't associate cooking butter with our ideas of quality in candy.

So, we use nothing but pure creamery butter—“Meadowgold”—in one pound blocks, just as in your pantry.

Another thing we've never learned is how to use powdered milk and cream.

It may be “Just as good,” but we’re old fashioned enough to believe that the fresh 22% rich cream we get daily from the dairy makes these candies that little bit better which distinguishes them.

Then, there's sugar. If you made some candy for the home folks you'd use pure cane sugar, wouldn't you?

The same with us, for these are home-made candies. We've never had any desire to learn how to use substitutes for sugar.

Notice, also, how thickly with chocolate these candies are coated, giving them that distinctive crisp richness. We never even tried to learn how to economize by “thinning out” this chocolate coating.

True, it does cost more to use pure creamery butter, fresh cream, and best cane sugar; to pile the chocolate on thick, and to do the many other things in keeping with what you expect in home-made candies.

And we doubt if we could sell these candies for 70c the pound were it not for the great volume which the tremendous demand for Martha Washington has created.

But, somehow, we're just old-fashioned enough to believe that candies are not of the very highest quality unless they are made this way.

And there seem to be a vast number of people, the country over, who feel the same as we do, for they certainly do like Martha Washington candies.

MELLON POINTS FAULTS IN HOUSE TAX BILL DRAFT

President's Emergency Resolution Buried.

Washington, D. C., March 12.—(Special)—Specific objections to the tax bill passed by the house were made by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon today before the senate finance committee.

He was making it plain that the Coolidge administration disapproves of the Longworth compromise tax bill as sponsored by the recognized Republican leaders of the house. Representative Longworth (Rep., O. J. O'Connell, their leader, who informed President Coolidge that there was not a ghost of a chance to pass the emergency tax resolution advocated by the President for a reduction of 25 per cent in taxes on incomes of 1923.

Coolidge Plan Hopless.

Mr. Longworth, in a statement following the conference with the President, said that as a matter of fact passage of the emergency legislation was not necessary. He said that the last date for filing returns would be of practical benefit to only a relatively small number of taxpayers and that the general tax bill, which he expects to be enacted into law by June 1, is certain to contain the 25 per cent retroactive tax reduction.

Some of the friends of the administration in the house made a final effort during the day to round up support for the President's emergency resolution, but finally admitted they could not even get it out of the ways and means committee.

Mellon's Criticisms in Brief.

Criticisms of the house tax bill as voted by Secretary Mellon before the Senate finance committee were as follows:

That the bill will mean a loss in revenue of $450,000,000 as against an estimated surplus of $350,000,000 for the fiscal year 1924.

That surtax rates proposed are too high and that the 25 per cent maximum of the original Mellon plan will both stimulate business and yield ultimately more revenue than higher rates.

That there is absolutely no reason for a $25,000 limitation on earned income as provided in the house bill, and that the extension of the definition of earned income to include an amount representing a reasonable salary for personal services presents great administrative difficulties.

The same provision authorizing the senate finance committee and the house ways and means committee to obtain access to the tax returns is objectionable inasmuch as it means a violation of the privacy of tax returns respected by all the nations and by all states except Wisconsin.

Against Inheritance Inquiries.

That the proposed increase of inheritance taxes from a maximum of 25 per cent to a maximum of 40 per cent is most unfair and that the provision for crediting state inheritance taxes to the federal tax is discriminatory as between states with different rates.

That the proposed tax on gifts is susceptible of evasion by spreading the gifts over a period of years and that it will mean practically nothing in the way of revenue to the government.

That a modification in the reduction and repeal of miscellaneous taxes should be made with a view to revenue.

Secretary Mellon read a prepared statement before the finance committee in executive session. His statement was supplemented by remarks by Undersecretary of the Treasury Weston. Both will return tomorrow for further questioning.

"THE KING of the BLACK ISLES" In Person

BOOK SECTION—THIRD FLOOR

MARSHALL FIELD & COMPANY

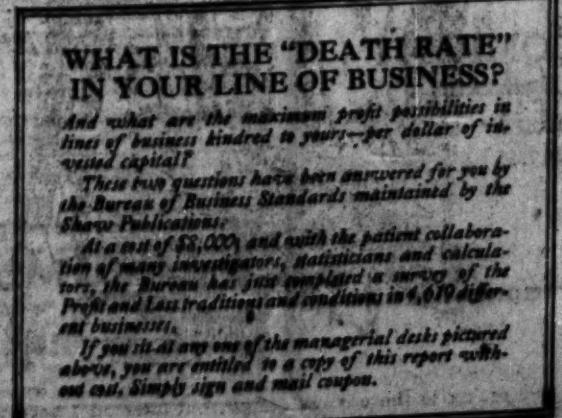

To Business Executives:

-if you sit at one of these desks a copy of the most vital business survey in years is FREE to you—for the asking!

IF YOU are a business man, skilled in successful investment, you know the thrill that comes in clipping coupons.

But you've never clipped a more cashable coupon than the one in the lower right hand corner of this advertisement.

For this coupon will bring you, without cost and without obligation, a copy of one of the most unusual surveys ever made in the field of business; an exacting and exhaustive summary of the Causes-of-Failure and the Statistics-of-Success in 378 different lines of American trade.

You may say: "What good will it do me to know the post-mortems of the other fellow's business?" But you'll dismiss that question quickly on second thought.

It is becoming increasingly difficult every day for the ostrich-minded man to survive in business. No man, these days, can afford to stick his head in the sands of indifference, and ignore the warnings of experience from business all around him.

Business students are alert to the fact that the only way to lower the failure rate is to study its predominant and recorded causes, and devise the proper antidotes for them.

Profit from the ledger facts of 4,619 businesses

When a prudent man discovers a tendency toward dyspepsia or rheumatism in his family, he regulates his living habits to circumvent the family failing.

There are family maladies in every line of business—weaknesses peculiar to the trade. To be forewarned is to be forearmed against them.

If it means anything to you to know:

—How fast business die—What types of business make the most money—How fast the business death rate is increasing—What line of business is riskiest—What the death rate is for retail concerns—Manufacturing plants—Wholesale lines—What line of business is most profitable—What causes business fail—What chance a man has to "live" 30 years—What the average life of a business is—Why 6 out of 10 concern die within 30 years—What businesses live longest —then you cannot mail the coupon too quickly, for your own profits. It is as bankable to you, as the dividend coupons of a gilt-edged bond.

The Bureau of Business Standards—operated by the Shaw Publications—spent $8,000 to prepare this report. It represents a patient survey of 4,619 different businesses in 378 branches of trade.

Without price—but priceless
But please do not misunderstand us. The coupon below isn't going to bring you anything of intrinsic physical value—to be measured in inches or ounces.

It will bring you a sheet of paper, a legal-looking, folded sheet, about the size of your income tax return. But that sheet will contain the most remarkable set of facts and figures the business world has seen in years.

You obligate yourself in no way whatever, in accepting this valuable report. We have an ax to grind, of course—we want every business executive in America to know the kind of work the Bureau of Business Standards is doing for the betterment of business everywhere. And we know of no better way to advertise this work than through this concrete example of the Bureau's service.

In New York City, a few weeks ago, over a million men clipped coupons from their daily newspaper, in a single day, to save six cents on a package of cigarettes. Little advertising and compensation opportunities appeal readily to the multitude. But it takes a little more than a big sum, to recognize the big and unusual opportunity. That is why we are confining the appeal of this advertisement wholly to business executives.

This coupon may help to insure and protect the wheels of your business. Will you sign and send it now—or ask your secretary to fill out this coupon for you and mail it today!

Henrici's

¶ In a broad way, it may be said that Henrici's is the business of no one person, or small group of persons.

¶ This enterprise is, and long since has been, dedicated to the service of its patrons to a degree that makes them participating owners in a very real sense.

¶ Such is the attitude not only of those responsible for the general management of Henrici's but of those, also, who serve the institution in other capacities.

¶ No doubt you have noticed a suggestion of special sincerity and confidence in the manner in which the waitresses at Henrici's place food before patrons.

¶ That sort of thing comes about through maintenance of so sincere a standard of operation that every person serving Henrici's feels, instinctively, that equal consideration for the interests of patrons is to be found in few, if any, other restaurants.

¶ And that is why Henrici's is first in the estimation of more people than regularly patronize any other first class restaurant, from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

¶ Why not Henrici's, today, for breakfast, luncheon, dinner, or late supper?

COSGRAVE PLANS ARMY INQUIRY IN IRISH "MUTINY"

Officers Back Down on Ultimatum.

BY HUGH CURRAN.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.) (Circumst. 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.) DUBLIN, March 12.—Today was another day of intense anxiety over the serious Irish domestic situation caused by a mutiny in the army, but apparently the government is still holding out.

Up to this afternoon few were found who were willing to bank on the cabinet's survival. Tonight the situation may be summed up as follows: President Cosgrave agrees to hold a cabinet inquiry into the alleged maladministration in the army, while Joseph McGrath has withdrawn his resignation as minister of industry and commerce.

Would Withdraw Ultimatum.

President Cosgrave read to the Dail tonight a letter signed by Gen. Tom and Col. Dalton, leaders of the army mutineers, in which they advised to withdraw their letter of March 6 which was described as an ultimatum to the government. They agreed that the army like the police must be subject to civilian rule and that there should be no sectional or other organizations within the army.

The two officers said that their purpose was achieved in the publicity given them and in the promise of an inquiry by President Cosgrave. The letter, read quietly to the house, presented no claim of debt of which we insisted on by Labor Deputy Johnson following an earlier announcement of a cabinet inquiry into army administration.

Demand Full Data.

Mr. Johnson demanded the fullest information regarding the real facts in the case as a right due the Dail Dáil and the people. Kevin O'Higgins, home minister, in replying, stated that the first letter of the officers was mutiny plus treason. He said that steps have been taken to deal with the situation.

Major Bryan Cooper, in urging an exhaustive inquiry, pointed out that already the affair had caused depreciation of Irish national stock.

SPANIARDS FACE
RIFFIAN DEFFAT;
ALFONSO TOTTERS

BY HENRY WALTERS.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.) (Circumst. 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.)

PARIS, March 12.—The Moroccan situation is producing strong reaction in Spain, and THE TRIBUNE is reliably informed that the abdication of King Alfonso and the overthrow of the dictatorship headed by Primo de Rivera may develop hourly in Madrid.

Despite optimistic reports on the war against the Rifians, THE TRIBUNE learns authoritatively that the Spanish forces in Morocco are greater than they were two years ago, when the Moors almost captured Melilla.

If activities of Abdel Krim develop further it is feared that the entire Spanish forces may be captured or killed. Six months after Primo de Rivera seized the government, with a promise of a housecleaning and the eradication of the graft, the soldiers' health and morale are undermined by the rotten food, the shabby shells and cartridges, and inefficient officers. King Alfonso is seriously involved because he has supported Primo de Rivera.

WOULD GIVE CITY
RIGHT TO RETIRE
AGED EMPLOYEES

Elimination of superannuated municipal employees is contemplated in the order offered in the city council yesterday by Ald. J. M. Arvey [34th] directing the efficiency, economy, and rehabilitation committee to determine the feasibility of establishing a retirement fund for city workers.

In nearly every department, advancement of civil service employee is retarded by the continued retention of aged employees who seek to "die in the harness," the alderman asserted. Establishment of a compulsory retirement date, he said, would aid department heads in weeding out employees incapable of work, but protected in their berths by seniority.

A second order introduced by Ald. Arvey directed the finance committee to discontinue appropriations for "expert" investigators and attorneys' fees under council committee allowances.

$100,000 IN BEER
POURED IN CANAL

159,000 Gallons More Doomed Here.

While United States Marshal Robert R. Levy was in Joliet yesterday to supervise the pouring of 2,100 barrels of beer from the vats of the E. Porter Products company, representatives of City Treasurer John Cervena, president of the Pilson Products company, were engaged in a desperate effort to forestall similar destruction of 159,000 gallons of real beer at the Pilson plant.

Judge Denies Plea.

On representations that a federal judge was going beyond his powers in ordering the destruction of beer, lawyers contend they should be permitted to reopen the brewery on payment of $1,000 bond.

Federal Judge Cliffe denied the plea and wrote places in the hands of Marshal Levy, ordering him to do away with the Pilson stores forthwith.

Canal Gets $100,000 Beer.

Mr. Levy sent word to Joliet last night that the Porter beer will be dumped into the Illinois drainage canal and that all of his assistants were ready to proceed today with the wrecking of $250,000 worth of machinery in the plant.

The Pilson pouring will be done this afternoon if the wrecking crew can get back to Chicago in time, Mr. Levy said.

MINE RESCUERS HALTED BY FIRES;
128 BODIES OUT

Castle Gate, Utah, March 12.—(By the Associated Press.)—Many small fires hampered rescue crews in mine Number 1 at Castle Gate, Utah, for nearly two hours today, but they have all been extinguished, according to official announcement, and the grim task of searching for further bodies of the 175 miners entombed and believed all dead in a series of explosions last Saturday has been resumed.

At 2 p. m. the body of the 128th victim was brought to the surface.

Thirty-four bodies of victims of the disaster were taken by automobile to Helper and Price, Utah, for interment there. Several also were shipped to other Utah points and to several Nevada towns.

Because of the large number of funeral services that will be necessary no church services will be held for any of the victims. Only short services will be held at the graves for the victims, but plans are being formulated for a modest public memorial service to be held in about three weeks.

RED AMBASSADOR IN ROME.

Mr. March 12.—Dr. Constantine Yerofeyev, ambassador of the Russian soviet government to Italy, has been recalled. He proceeded immediately to take possession of the former imperial Russian embassy.

FORTUNE'S TURN LANDS MINER IN PALACE OF KING

BY JOHN STEELE.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.) (Circumst. 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, March 12.—Another Cinerella story growing out of the advent of the Labor party to power comes to light today with the appointment of James J. Cannon, socialist, as lord high constable to the general assembly for the Church of Scotland.

"A bit of a babbie," Mr. Brown said in an interview today. "I used to be taken over Holyrood palace and looked with awe at the ancient home of the Stuart Kings, never dreaming that I would one day come to live there."

"It is a wonderful change for us all. The wife cannot realize it yet, but she is coming around. She will be."

"You know, after tomorrow, But just because I am a Socialist, living in a $10 cottage, don't think that it means that any of the old dignitaries or traditions will be departed from. I am a strong believer in maintaining the ancient dignities of office."

Going to "Show 'Em."

"I am going to show Scotland, and England as well, that a Socialist and a miner can do the thing properly and maintain historic traditions."

Mr. Brown is strongly religious, being a Presbyterian, like most Scotch Socialists, and he owes his education and advancement to the kirk. Like Prime Minister MacDonald, he is a regular churchgoer. He was converted to socialism by the late Keir Hardie.

Grown Up in Mines.

Mr. Brown is a miner who started to work in a pit at the age of 12, and has still lived in a miner's cottage, paying $10 ($42) annual rent, with his wife, who was a mill girl. The couple will soon take up residence in Holyrood castle as representatives of royalty, living in royal style, and receiving the homage as the king's representatives of the oldest and proudest nobility of Scotland.

SCHOOLS' SHARE FOR WASHINGTON EXCEEDS $8,000

Swells Fund to Purchase Stuart Portrait.

DEADLINE IS NEAR IN THAT $25,000 HUNT FOR A NAME

After midnight, March 31, it will be too late to enter the $25,000 magazine name contest. Last will be your opportunity to send in that name and slogan you thought would be such a good one for the new national weekly magazine, which the owners of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and The New York News will publish early in the spring. If you send the name in now—before it is too late, you may win $20,000 which is first prize and is to be awarded to the person submitting the best name and slogan of all for the magazine. The second prize of $4,000 is to go to the person submitting the second best name and slogan, and $1,000, which is third prize, goes to the person submitting the third best name and slogan. There are a few names and slogans already submitted:

"THE AGE OF ARTS—Welcome in Anyone's Hand."

"ALL AROUND MAGAZINE—A Weekly Panorama of World Events for Everybody."

"THE PASSING WEEK—The Magazine of the Week."

"CHUM—A Valuable Friend."

"VOX POPULI—A Fountain of Facts, Fiction, Fashion and Fun."

"THE SCORE—The Game of Life in Fact and Fiction."

"TIMELY—The National up to the Minute News and Picture Weekly."

If you have not already read the rules—be sure to read them before sending in suggestions. They will be printed in Sunday's issue of this newspaper.

In figuring the adjusted service credit, maximums of $500 would be allowed for home service and $600 for overseas service. It was estimated that the maximum face value of any certificate would be about $1,400 for a veteran who served full time at home or $1,300 for one who served full time overseas.

In each school, the children were enthusiastic over the project, sponsored by THE TRIBUNE, Herald-Examiner, and Art Institute, to keep for Chicago the famous masterpiece. Although each child was only asked for 1 cent, thousands contributed more than that.

As many of the schools in Chicago worked especially hard, in order to secure one of the paintings offered by Paul Schulte as prizes for the schools making the best showing.

Photographer Aids Fund.

In a few days every person in Chicago will be able to have a perfect photographic copy of the famous masterpiece. Harry L. Diamond, president of the Melvin Sykes studios already has started work on a thousand of the reproductions and they will be placed in stores.

Mr. Diamond has offered to make the pictures for the Art Institute at cost and the proceeds will go into the fund for the purchase of the portrait.

Numerous organizations, such as women's relief corps, patriotic societies, lodges, women's clubs, and Sunday school classes are lining up behind the enterprise, sending in contributions and working for the success of the project.

A check for $150 from the Illinois Society of Colonial Dames of America was received yesterday by the Art Institute.

Money Raised for Purchase.

THE TRIBUNE will welcome, acknowledge and turn over to the Art Institute all contributions sent to it. Contributions received by THE TRIBUNE, Herald-Examiner, and Art Institute follow:

PHOENIX HOSIERY

TERMS OF BONUS SETTLED; HEADED FOR HOUSE VOTE

Insurance Plan Figured to Cost Two Billions.

Washington, D. C., March 12.—Terms of the new soldier bonus bill providing paid up life insurance policies were agreed on today by a subcommittee of the house ways and means committee and will be taken before that body for decision tomorrow.

Chairman Green announced he would attempt to have the measure acted on next Monday by the house under suspension of the rules which would limit debate, prevent amendments, and permit a vote in one day.

Twenty Year Endowment Plan.

The insurance policies, it was decided, would be twenty year endowment and valued on the basis of length of service of each veteran, with $1 allowed for each day of home service and $1.25 for each day of overseas service, but with the first sixty days excluded.

To this total would be added 25 per cent and the face value of the policy that would be determined by computing the total amount of adjusted service credit plus the twenty years of credit 4 per cent interest.

In figuring the adjusted service credit, maximums of $500 would be allowed for home service and $600 for overseas service. It was estimated that the maximum face value of any certificate would be about $1,400 for a veteran who served full time at home or $1,300 for one who served full time overseas.

Provide for Dependents.

Under previous agreements all veterans up to the rank of captain in the army and marine corps and lieutenant colonel in the navy would be eligible to include the dependents of all veterans who have died since the end of the war. Cash payments would be made to all veterans not entitled to them in any case.

The total cost of the bill, it was estimated, would be about $20,000,000,000, and not more than $10,000,000,000 would have to be expended by the government in any one year.

Confessor of Slaying Is Held on Check Charge

Edward Premski, who confessed a few days ago he had murdered Father Florian Chodkiewicz, Catholic priest, but who since has repudiated the confession, yesterday was held to the grand jury on charges of larceny and passing a forged check.

James Penn, an American of Lardeau, Texas, was robbed of $10,000 between the highway station here and a hotel by a holdup man who seized a bag in which he was carrying the money.

FOUR CALL HIRE BORROW.

Andrew Ruskin, 2015 South Florissant, was held to the grand jury on a robbery charge yesterday after a 16-year old niece testified that he forced her to have school and live with him in a rooming house.

Danger Ahead

Illinois is the second State in the Union in point of hard surfaced roads, with 3,351 miles to its credit. Indiana, while boasting of a comparatively small hard surfaced mileage, nevertheless shows a greater mileage of improved roads than any other State.

Touring conditions are ideal in Illinois and Indiana, and this year will see a tremendous increase in the number of cars on the highways of these States.

The Chicago Motor Club, operating in northern Illinois and Indiana, has marked the highways in a thorough and distinctive manner.

The Club warning and direction signs follow a standardized scheme of color and form. Wherever you see one of the Chicago Motor Club diamond-shaped signs, with its red and black letters on a yellow field, you may be certain that danger is ahead.

You will find thousands of these signs at schools, railroad crossings, sharp curves, and dangerous cross roads. They are never erected unless there is real danger.

Heed them. If you know of a dangerous place in this territory, report it to the Club, and if our investigation proves that the place should have a sign, one will be erected promptly.

Form the habit of looking for caution signs on the highways; it is a habit that some day may save your life.

REBELS GIVE UP TO OBREGON IN GUERRERO STATE

(Chicago Tribune Foreign Service)

Mexico City, March 12.—A landslide of rebel troops towards the government from the state of Guerrero began yesterday, when 400, including a number of prominent generals, surrendered at Tolosa, 300 at Cuernavaca, and 800 at Puerto de Ixtla. Gen. Romulo Figueroa, is reported dangerously ill at Iguala, the insurgent headquarters.

Gen. Jesus Aguirre, with his Mayo Indians, the heroes of the battle of Ocotlan, took possession of Puerto de Ixtla.

Gen. Roberto Cruz, with cavalry and infantry, also from Ocotlan, last night began a march from Cuernavaca upon Iguala following orders from President Obregon.

The department of the treasury has extended for six months the time in which banks may be compelled to deposit bonds which banks were permitted to issue. These bills have not been in circulation since the time of the late President Carranza.

HARMONY FLEES VETERAN BUREAU MUSIC SCHOOL

Student Tells Director
Place Lacks Tone.

Forty-seven wounded veterans studying music at the U. S. veterans bureau school, 1508 Prairie avenue, rebelled yesterday, charged some of their number had been "turned out incompetent as musicians" and demanded a change of system if we have to walk to Washington to get it."

They met at their own request in the school with C. E. Hostettler, chief of the rehabilitation division of the bureau, flatly accused him and his aids, and finally agreed to send a committee to him with their grievances some time tomorrow.

Leads Veterans' Revolt.

Percy Lynn of Harvey, Ill., who has been cut off from his class, was at the Metropolitan Conservatory of Music, but is retained on the government veterans' bureau pay roll, was called into the school to act as spokesman for his comrades although he has not been a student there. He assailed the "system" of the bureau bitterly, and finally turned to Mr. Hostettler, who sat among his aids to one side. Lynn said he would carry his fight to Washington.

"Mr. Hostettler," he said angrily, "I am accusing you and your assistants of willfulness and knowingly turning men out of this school who had not been properly or completely trained as musicians to compete with men otherwise trained."

"What are you trying to do?" Mr. Hostettler asked. "Make a grand stand play?"

"No," Lynn replied. "I'm simply accusing you, that's all."

You're making an ass of yourself," Mr. Hostettler replied, and then Lynn swung round to the forty-seven students of the school: "Am I—an I making an ass of myself?" he asked. Then he pleaded: "Tell him whether I am or not." And every man replied, "No."

Talks as "Man to Man."

Mr. Hostettler then said: "Now, men, I think I am human. I have tried to treat you all fair and square. I have done unto you fellows as I would like to have you do unto me. I am accused of all sorts of things, but I have never tried to put myself in your place and to see things from your point of view. I want to say that as man to man, and I want to treat you fellows as man to man, and if I have failed, then I have certainly been kidding myself into believing I was doing the right thing."

CHINA REOPENS BIG OPIUM FIELDS, LICENSES SALE

Kiangsi Breaks World Agreement.

BY JOHN POWELL

SHANGHAI, March 12.—The Chinese province of Kiangsi, containing a population of 25,000,000, has been taken over for the production and sale of opium. This action is interpreted here as the beginning of the wholesale production of opium in China under official auspices.

According to regulations adopted by provincial military officials, stamps will be issued which must be affixed to the parcels after which the trade will be entirely legal. Retailers will be granted the right to trade in the drug for periods of four months. In addition all persons possessing opium pipes must pay a license fee of $8 a month.

$400,000 Worth a Month.

The central provincial office plans to handle $400,000 worth of the drug each month. Its plans include a complete system of inspection and licensing.

Owing to the proposal of the inspector of customs of the central government a year ago that the production and sale of opium in China be legalized under government monopoly as the only way to control the trade, this movement in the province of Kiangsi is interpreted here as the beginning of the complete legalization of the trade and a reversion to the ancient methods of China.

Bound by Hague Pact.

For the last dozen years China has been bound by the Hague convention gradually to decrease the consumption of opium, provided that foreign nations stop bringing it in. This convention is now ended. For the last two years opium production has been springing up all over China, being on couraged by the military officials as a means of raising funds for their armies. Opium smuggling and illicit trading have become so common in recent months that foreign controlled customs are practically idle. A few days ago the Shanghai police seized $100,000 worth of the drug, but the authorities' efforts are futile because the drug is coming in and is being produced in the interior faster than the officials can prevent.

Foreigners, especially missionaries, are alarmed, believing that China will revert to its old opium days unless some action is taken immediately by the powers to halt the present tendency.

Following a decision of the Peoples' Government that Hugo Stinnes should not be a candidate for the party, twelve members declared their intention of resigning and forming the National Liberal party, to be composed entirely of Stinnes' friends. ROMA, March 12.—Pope Pius XI will hold two consistories. The first will take place on March 27, when Archbishops Mundelein and Hayes will be made cardinals. The second probably will be held in June, when three or four foreign and Italian prelates will be elevated to the cardinalate.

Herr Ebert said he could not remain at the head of the German state when the Socialist party loses its predominant influence, which it has held since the revolution of 1918. The former leader, who has been at the helm of the German republic since its birth, will retire to his home in Stuttgart.

Save Shoe Money! Ask for K. L. Resoles

With an active youngster above and hard pavement beneath, a piece of leather is between two millstones. Every movement scratches, scrapes and grinds down the sole.

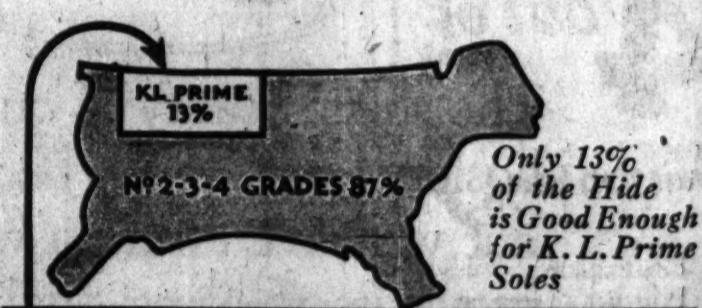

It's expensive play—unless you have the children's shoes resoled with K. L. Resoles. Have them resoled as often as the uppers will stand it. You will find their shoes wearing longer between resolings, and you won't be buying new shoes so often.

Why They Stand the Gaff

K. L. Prime Resoles are genuine leather, selected from the choicest hides and from the very best part of the hide. They are oak tanned. No better method has ever been found. It requires more time, but it pays.

K. L. Soles are natural weight. There's no acid used in tanning to make them look thick. Acid rots the fibre and destroys the wear.

Tough, wear resisting, medium weight K. L. Prime Soles are easy on the uppers and make the shoes last longer.

Three Things to Remember:

- 1 It is the mark of real thrift to have your shoes resoled; and every good pair is worth at least two resolings.
- 2 Have them resoled by a reliable shoe repair shop.
- 3 Insist upon K. L. Prime Oak Leather Resoles.

YES, I'M NOT ILL,
CHANCE SAYS;
MENU PROVES IT

BY EDWARD DOWDERTY.

White Sulphur, March 12.—[Special.]—Frank Chance, the new leader of the Chicago White Sox, has broken all rumors that he was about to retire from baseball because of tuberculosis.

In the mountain lodge of Dr. and Mrs. Albert Van Brunt, on Snow Creek, some five miles out of White Sulphur, 5,800 feet above it, Mr. Chance cleaned up his last sparsers and laughed.

"I've written Mr. Comiskey," he said, "that I would meet him in Chicago on or about April 1. Mr. Comiskey wrote back to take all the time I wanted. I could go right now."

He is a team of blue content with second place.

Edmond was third in the lead, a solid competitor in the mile.

He had to work hard to get the lead, in front, at the finish line.

Dogs had trekked all the way with him.

They had taken the last mile of the race never headed.

The gathering for this country gave the dog a rubdown and re-

SOX CAMP PERTURBED

BY FRANK SMITH.

Winter Haven, Fla., March 12.—[Special.]—Reports that Manager Frank Chance probably would be unable to join the White Sox before the opening of the season in Chicago was received here today with much feeling.

Secretary Harry Grabiner, however, continues optimistic, saying he has every reason to believe the doubting Thomases will be disappointed in their prediction.

The message conveying the information that Chance might be a stoker man than the baseball aethorite he would have every one believe.

EVERY DAY FIVE SOX BOOKIES.

Until such time as it is positively known that the peerless leader will be to report the team will be under the immediate charge of J. Johnny Evers, who Secretary Grabiner acting in an advisory capacity.

He has been given authority to see the ability of the recruits and after a couple practice games some may expect to get the gate.

There was no practice this morning, in the extreme cold, the thermometer registering at about 7 o'clock, the temperature rising until at noon it was fairly comfortable in the sun. The thirty mile wind that swept the tall yard in the morning died down at 120 when the gang swung into action the day was a bit chilly, but one of the best workouts of the trip was made.

Pitcher Moore Arrives.

Indoors and outfield practice was engaged in after a good batting mælum, while all the flingers, including Roy Moore, who arrived some time during the night, steamed them over in good shape. Admiral Martin complained of a sore arm and had to retire. He is the only athlete who went to the games before time was called.

GASOLINE ALLEY—SAFETY FOREVER, REMARKS OUR HERO

PIRATE BOSS TO VISIT CUBS; TRADES HINTED

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Avalon, Catalina Island, Cal., March

13.—[Special.]—Trade winds started blowing in the 'Cubs' training camp today when word was passed around that Barney Dreyfus, owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, would set foot on the island tomorrow. The shrewd Smoketown magnate is coming to talk with William Wrigley, the Cubs owner, and Manager Killefer, but Barney has his cap tight under his hat and the Chicago clubs refuse to venture an opinion as to what might come off.

If a trade is in mind, the supposition is that it involves shortstop. The Pirates have at least three of this particular variety of athletes, and Cubs have one good one who refuses to re-sign, but might after his course is skipped to another team. Barney, of course, would like to have a preference to any one he now owns, and there also is a probability that he might tempt the Cubs with a shortstop if he could get a fairly reputable hurler in return.

Getting in Shape Fast.

"We're getting into shape mighty fast," Chance went on from the supposition. "We wake up early here and feed the fish; honest, no kidding; tame trout. So tame you can catch them in your hands if you want to. Van Brunt had them all named last year. And then we're hitting or hunting or swimming in the big pools down the beach. Boy, when you plunge into that water in the morning there's nothing feels half as good on earth."

"We've got the camp stocked with food—everything you can think of. We've got a camp doctor and we pick up Chicago some nights—wonderful town. We've got the finest water, the finest air, and the finest play grounds in the world right here on this little island. And the only consumption prevalent is the violent consumption of food."

Eats Corned Beef.

"One of Frank's friends sent him a huge chunk of corned beef," said Mrs. Chance. "It must have weighed two pounds. I think he's going to have a diet gun on her diet, so he didn't eat more than half of it."

Mrs. Van Brunt insists on making coffee. It is good coffee. Mrs. Chance insists that Frank show his chest. Frank unbuckles his shirt.

"They've got me ranked with star trifles like like an Indian," he said. "And I've got my own team with only a pair of running trunks on me. It looks the asthma all right."

The Fox boys talk in a hunky voice, but without trouble. There is a good healthy color on his face. He is tanned almost as brown as his chest is painted—and he hasn't any stomach to speak of.

Never did go in much for the damned tummy," he said.

Likes Soft Players.

"How do you think you'll be able to do?" he asked.

"I am absolutely well right now. I never felt better in my life. Give me a few more weeks here, and I'll go four rounds with anybody."

The conversation drifted to the Sox. Chance believes he has a good team.

"There's going to be no trouble in managing them," he says. "Either they are all ball players or they don't get along."

"That's the way I manage them; I believe they are ball players, but I'll end out good enough. And so will the baseball fans."

Cubs to Travel in Style.

So that the team will not lose a workout Thursday afternoon, Wrigley has ordered one of his channel steamers out of winter storage for a special trip Friday morning. The boat will sail from here directly to Long Beach, where the Cubs play that afternoon.

The steamer will make a special trip to bring the party back to the island immediately after Sunday's exhibition.

37,873 Grocery Stores Serve McCall Street

Population 8,944,000 census of April 1924

The volume of food which must be produced and distributed for McCall Street is much greater than that required to feed the entire American Army during the World War

THE Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. does the largest cash business on earth. It sells $300,000,000 worth of groceries a year, in 7,500 stores.

But it would take a grocery concern five times bigger than the A. & P. to supply McCall Street with the food it consumes.

37,873 retail grocery stores are located on McCall Street, serving two million families who read McCall's Magazine, and who eat over ten billion meals a year!

629 wholesale grocery houses supply these retail outlets with the food products which McCall Street consumes—products valued at a billion and a half dollars a year.

There is not a manufacturer of food products in America today big enough to supply McCall Street—if McCall Street were made to buy all of its requirements in any one product from a single source.

There is not a grocery jobber or grocery retailer or a chain store in America big enough to distribute the food McCall Street uses. It takes 629 jobbers and 37,873 retailers to do that job and nothing else.

What an opportunity for the manufacturer who will intensify his sales efforts to secure distribution in the intensified market represented by McCall Street.

You can reach and influence McCall Street only through McCall's Magazine, for McCall Street is McCall's Magazine. It is the visioned street on which live the 2,000,000 happy, prosperous families who read McCall's eagerly each month, who look to it for entertainment, for new and pleasant ways to do the humdrum tasks of life, for ideas in housekeeping, in the purchase, preparation and serving of food.

The advertising of your product in McCall's Magazine is the first step in selling this great national market.

If the 2,000,000 families in which McCall's Magazine is read all live on a single street—a home every 25 feet—the houses would line both sides of a roadway from Boston to San Diego.

The Sick Pearl
BY BERTA RUCK.

SYNOPSIS.
Margaret Verity at 18 was a brazen, blasphemous, and neurotic young woman. She had not been to bed but of the hectic-chaos after amusements from morning until night. She was an amateur in men, gambling, cards, touring, cocktail absorbing, cigaret smoking, night dancing, making love, and most of the most ungrateful type.

Up to the time she was 12 years old Margaret was a robust, outdoor child. She and her beloved mother were poor, but they lived a simple life in a tiny cottage in Sussex by the sea. Mrs. Verity's husband was a sailor who died at sea in the late autumn of 1914. Just before Margaret's twelfth birthday Mrs. Verity's uncle, Tom Lloyd, sent the child a check for five pounds as a birthday gift. Margaret decided that her mother would spend the money on a trip to London. They barely made the train and the guard pushed them into a first class compartment, which was already occupied by Charles Mount and a tourist. Mount was on his way to Switzerland. He was hopelessly ill from gas. Margaret's brother among him, and he asked me to write to him. This interesting serial began on Monday. Start reading it today.

INSTALLMENT IV.

MARGARET'S LEGACY.

In racing high spirits, she rattled on so that Mrs. Verity would not have been able to check her had she tried.

She didn't try. She realized, innocent, unconscious chatter from this gay little creature at the beginning of life came as a godsend to this sad, self-interested, self-centered man setting forth on his last, his hopeless journey. Poinsett instead of the usual bouquet of that railway carriage group.

With all his eyes half-closed, as though he drank in good cheer from her racing words. His eyes were fastened upon that vivid face opposite to him. As he looked at the child, all the eyes of Wallace never left him.

Some time before they got to town the young man turned from the child to her mother.

"Frightfully rude of me," he apologized in that reticent whisper, "not to have introduced myself. You will forgive the vagaries of an invalid? My name is Mount—Charles Mount. If you don't mind I'll give you my card. Good Lord, I am buried before my time in this mass of funk! Wallace, here, I am going to write down the address of that beauty Swiss place. Pencil."

"Please do; if there is anything else you want for something?"

"Look here, I haven't got anybody belonging to me except Archie, my young brother. He's in a destroyer somewhere. Not a brother, John! I've no one to write to me except him. Just the two of us, and he might have me buried, you never know! Letters mean a lot to a—me. Do you think you could allow me to have a line to say how the little girl enjoys her matinée and that sort of thing? It would be kind. Not if it's too much trouble, but it would be kind."

What could tender-hearted Violet Verity say? She was emotional by the whole incident. Tears softened her always soft eyes. I can imagine how her lips, sweetly gentle under her hopeless toque, quivered at this; I can imagine the thin voice that prompted: "Of course, I'll write, if you like letters. And will you write, Archie, and tell me how you get to Switzerland? Here's our address, Margaret shall write to you herself about the matinée."

"Will you, Margaret?" said the young man.

"O, rather! I love writing letters. I've hardly any to write! I'll write to you," promised the child, "until you come home again."

At Victoria, of course, there was a great deal of bustle, of handing that bundle of rage across to another platform and of finding those stacks of Mr. Mount's extravagant luggage.

Mrs. Verity, eager to help, but poor dear, perfectly ignorant about what to do since left her own well-known milieu, waited by him while the grim-faced, stern-faced Wallace put the fear of God into every porter on the platform.

Margaret Verity, in a narrow circle, like a terrier on a leash, watching the platform crowd, the war-toms of holly and mistletoe, the queues of soldier men, looked up for leave.

Mr. Mount murmured: "You're going to have a wonderful day with the child."

"Yes, I think so. I am sure she'll enjoy it. (Why can't I think of something comforting to say to this poor fellow?) She enjoys everything."

"Hope she always will. Her life ought to be roses all the way. Ghastly, the inevitable way one drops into threadbare quotation, isn't it?" He added, "I am sure Mr. and Mrs. Verity are at dinner tonight where they had to make talk: 'Do you happen to know those other lines—'

"On Lethe's shore,

Old Charon, leaning on his oar,

waits for my peace?'

"No. I—I am afraid I haven't read that poem at all."

Here Wallace came hurtling back through the press. "Now, Mr. Charon,

He lifted his cap. "Not good—

I'll say what the gladiators used to say to Caesar; do you remember?"

Unfortunately, poor Mrs. Verity, out of her long ago history classes, did remember.

"Hall, Caesar! We, who are about to die, salute you!"

She choked over her good-by. But he had Margaret's most joyous smile to take on his journey.

Since the day when they had their last news of Charles Mount. He had died at that sanitarium place in Switzerland, and he had left his considerable fortune to Miss Margaret Verity "in gratitude for a friendship which had greatly cheered the last part of his life."

One of those gigantic swollen fortunes of the war, made out of tinned foods, or shoe leather, or gramophone records—something that had been made by the firm of F. & Sons. The father had not lived to see it, the profits were divided between the two sons, and now the older, Charles, had left his to Miss Verity, free of legacies! Everything was to come to the child at once—things up until she should be twenty-one.

Without any tiresome trusteeships or tangles, the destroyer had his own money. He got his family portraits, his mother's jewelry and personal belongings. Everything else was to belong to that little stranger whom Charles had seen once and from whom he had received perhaps half a dozen letters.

Imagine it! Reams came to me from her mother to tell me of this wonderful good fortune. Wasn't it splendid that Margaret would not have to grow up pampered and suppressed by the want of money? After all, the darling was to have every opportunity—education, foreign travel, charming surroundings. She could know crowds of the neatest people. Would make a circle of delightful friends!

In fact, she was to be roses all the way for this child of twelve.

Nine years later I saw her again. I must say it was a shock.

In November I went to call on Mrs. Verity at her London house. This was in Hill street. One of the tall, exclusive, discreet looking small houses which the front door is as ceremonious as the molded in some quattrocento castle. What a change from the Verity's last front door over the open, honey-colored garlanded porch of the cottage looking forth across winds down to the sea. Mrs. Verity's note told me Margaret had bought this Hill street house as it stood, as the furniture appealed to her, and that she would presently add touches of her own.

A butler with the face of a dyspeptic sphinx showed me up the mysterious and heavily carpeted staircase into the drawing room. Heavens, what a surprise!

How unlike the Veritys! How unlike their cottage living room's homely and disreputable, its bright rose chintz, its lattice windows flung open wide to let in a breeze and the breath of sweet peas and pinks from the garden!

I gazed about this new place. Walls, somberly and stiffly panelled, were hewn out of draperies of marvelous embroidery, by cabinets of costliest black lacquer, black and gold, and, by the red panels of a great screen jewelled over by dragons. Tall lamps stood in corners under weirdly colored glass shades; upon carved stands or joss tables squatted other lamps, in the shape of monkeys, of couches, of bedlives, divan-like chairs, tables, tasseled floor cushions, all covered in brocade; gold, black, and a touch of silver, with heavily drooping curtains of that gold and black brocade.

Heavily drooping curtains of that gold and black brocade framed the windows, which had inner curtains and half blinds of golden lace. Tables of inlay showed a scatter of fashion papers, magazines, news novels; a huge box of chocolates, upsetting its contents and drifts of white powder wings over the hearth rug, also one of these new grotesque dolls as big as a child, dressed as a young man in evening clothes with a wig of pale hair.

The whole room, I thought, represented some interior decorator's dream of a voluptuous lap of luxury.

Tastes differ. To me it gave a stifling, padded room feeling. I called it fat. It was full of flowers, and such wafts of trumpet lilies; a brazen stand of tubs of forced tulips; many bowls of Roman hyacinth, growing in silverware that had once been one of the joss sticks which one finds alight in a smoking fair. On a heavily carved pedestal one of those perfume burners was in full blast. And over all these mingling scents there brooded the atmosphere of a shut up room in which people heavily, thoroughly, and intensely smoked. An oriental, languorous warmth was meant, I fancy.

Tastes differ. I called it stuffy. Altogether the last atmosphere which I expected to find surrounding that open air Englishwoman, Mrs. Verity!

She came in.

"And what about your girl?" I asked presently. "I long to see Margaret."

"She is she well?"

"Yes! She's quite well, really."

Good Morning!

Unheralded and stunning a great picture comes to Chicago. The "Blizzard"—at the Monroe theater.

In the cold land where the reindeer grow, this photoplay was produced from the novel of Dr. Selma Lagerlof, who won the Nobel prize. It was directed for a Swedish company by a man who, like Ernest Lubitsch, knows how to blend power and beauty with an artistic gusto. The players prove that players alone prove the man a wizard. You will never forget the work of three of them—the boy, the girl, and the boy's mother.

CLOSEUPS

It is said that James Cruze is the only motion picture director who never rehearses a scene. He believes that rehearsal uses too much of a player's energy.

Matt Moore and Patsy Ruth Miller have been engaged as a starring team in F. B. O.'s new production "Fools in the Dark."

to write on and on about—but I mustn't. It's too good to have its first bloom rubbed off before you witness it.

DO see it and love it as I loved it "The Blizzard!" DON'T forget the name.

Griffith Movie Loses
Point in Tilt with City

City attorneys won a point yesterday in their attempt to prevent showing of the picture "Tilt with City," "Tilt with the Nation," which Judge John C. Pitcher refused to direct the jury to dismiss charges against the manager and four motion picture operators of the Auditorium theater, where the picture was shown. The judge held that Assistant Corporation Counsel Albert H. Vester that the question of whether the picture might have been a "flop" was a matter for the jury to determine. The argument in the class will be made today after the jury has seen the picture at a special showing at the Illinois theater.

Individuality Chief
Beauty Ingredient,
Expert Tells Women

Mrs. Ruth Mauer, president of a company manufacturing cosmetics and operating beauty shops, who has trained thousands of women in the arts and sciences of beauty, told all about it at the convention of the Fashion Art League of America at the Auditorium hotel last night.

The woman—beautiful, she said, is the "composite woman." She is the woman of mental attainments, who considers the gown merely the frame for the picture, who knows that complexion is a question of grooming, not simply of makeup.

"Makeup," said Mrs. Mauer, "is a vulgar thing. The 'painted ladies'—that is expressive of makeup. It has nothing to do with the proper use of cosmetics; that is a matter of refinement.

"There is a great deal of the mental about beauty. The woman who would be beautiful must be the vital-mental-motive type."

"She must be vital enough to want to live in pleasant surroundings, to have work or diversion that is agreeable and lucrative, if that is necessary. She must be motive enough to keep in condition, to take proper exercise and keep her figure; mental enough to take Bob Hope's advice: see herself as others see her; also to see what is beautiful in other women and to profit by her observations."

"In the matter of dress, I think a woman should be individual. By that I mean this: Paris decrees that gray, for instance, is the thing for this season; and the woman will wear gray regardless of the season. For that individual need. No matter what Paris decrees there are some women who should never wear gray; and the woman who may be sold of all the other colors in the spectrum.

"Paris should not dictate the fashions for a country so varied in people and climate as this country. I do not think that it is proper to attention to what Paris does,

SMILEY-WILEYS

A Smiley-Wiley is a fable of two lines. Any fable little rhyme that will make folks laugh is a Smiley-Wiley. For instance:

May your math be filled with roses
And your kids have turned up noses.

You can probably write a better one than this, but it is the best I can do for the Smiley-Wiley Editor. The Tribune, Chicago, will pay for the best, $2 for the third, $2 for the fourth, and $1 for the fifth.

The embroidery pattern, 659, costs 15 cents extra.

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

I want to be the medium through which the friend in need and the friend in need may be brought together. I have written a short article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate ones happy, and you would gladly give it if you know how to do about it. Write to me and I will be glad to send you a copy of the article to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not enclose a stamp. The Tribune will not charge for the address of the applicant and send direct.

Deep in Debt.

"We have three children, boys 6 and 5 years old, and a girl of 16 months, and are expecting another little one in a short time. Continued sickness of my husband and the children have put us in debt and it is all we can do to pay our bills, of which we still have plenty. I haven't a thing for the little one we expect, and would be grateful for anything received for it or any of the other children.

"I am also in great need of some kind of dresser or chest of drawers—or something to keep the children's clothes in. Do you suppose some one has anything like that to pass on? No matter in what condition it is, my husband could fix it, as he is handy that way.

Lace Veil of This Season Is Often a Scarf or Two

By Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—In that remote day when woman's ambition was to look her most beautiful, instead of her most chic, we used to adjust our face veil over our little toque and look ten years younger than we were. For a long time past this dear, becoming accessory has been out, and only a few wise women have clung to the dotted face veil.

This spring there is a strong tendency toward veils. They are not, however, the fairy godmothers which formerly made us look young and beautiful. They are the sort shown here in the lower illustration.

Make no mistake, however. To those who are really young and beautiful this floating strand of net and lace is eminently becoming. Others, on the contrary, should avoid this adornment as a pestilence. For it tends to add age rather than subtract it.

The hat with which this accessory of black net and lace is associated is one of the new creations of moire and Millar. The former is in black, and against it the underbrim of rose straw is especially bewitching. The flower used is one American Beauty rose, a form of trimming towards which both Paris and New York milliners show great partiality.

Or the lace veil of this season is not that at all. It is a scarf and is attached either to one or both sides of the hat. The latter comes of course in the Lewis model at the left. Here a black Milan straw in the new high-crowned and narrow brimmed style is encircled by black lace ribbon. Two black lace veils are attached to this by silver buckles.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

FATIGUE: TO REDUCE THE DIAPHRAM here is one exercise, a bit strenuous at first—but go lightly at first without forcing. Lie flat on your back on the floor, and try to bring your toes up and touch the floor back of your head. And this one: Stand with arms stretched wide, feet apart about two wide foot lengths. Without bending the knees, touch the finger tips of the right hand to the toe of the left foot. Reverse. Repeat about ten times. Gradually increase to fifteen and twenty times.

M. B. X.: EXERCISES FOR CONSTIPATION, to be taken morning and night after emptying the bladder: 1. Lie on the back on the floor or a bed, with legs straight out. Bend the right knee quickly to the chest, keeping the head and shoulders on floor. Replace. Repeat, bending the left knee. Do alternately five times—increasing to twenty and thirty. 2. Same position, only pull both knees forcibly to the chest at the same time. Rest. Repeat five times, gradually increasing number to twenty or thirty. Drink plenty of water. Eat such fiber foods as celery, raw vegetables like radish, onions, tomatoes. Eat cabbage, string beans, asparagus, lettuce, spinach, figs, prunes, apples—and bran in bread, muffins or crackers.

There happened to be two small pork chops in the house when I looked them into my mind's eye and I wanted the meat part for something. But I cleaned up the bones, trimmed them from the meat, leaving the fat on, added a pint of cold water to them, put them to cook for five hours at a simmering temperature after the water boiled, added some dried celery leaves after three hours, finally strained off the cup of liquid remaining, added two teaspoons of flour for thickening, cooked the thickened liquid another hour, strained it again, and added enough boiled noodles for two people, cooked the two together for a few minutes.

TTRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Gravy for Noodles.

Part of the reason why the English eat their pork pies to the skies is because the gravy around the meat is so good. Part of the reason why the Chinese noodle is so much appreciated is, I imagine, because the gravy is a pork gravy. At least, as I visualized it, when a correspondent wrote saying she could not make satisfactory gravy for noodles, and felt convinced that though the Chinese noodles be served over chicken, the gravy is often of pork.

Josephine Dunham's Name Added to List of 1924 Debutantes

Another debutante of next year will be Miss Josephine Dunham, who will return from Miss Risser's school in June. Although definite plans have not been made for Miss Dunham's formal presentation, it is probable that her mother, Mrs. Ethel Richardson Dunham, will give a tea for her in the late fall or early winter. Mrs. Dunham is occupying Mrs. Harry Shearson's apartment at 227 East Delaware place while Mrs. Shearson is in Florida.

Miss Dunham's father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Dunham of 111 State parkway, are planning to give a ball for her on Jan. 3 at the Drake. Mr. and Mrs. Dunham are going to California in May for the marriage of Mrs. Dunham's daughter, Miss Josephine Brown, and Jerd Sullivan, son of Judge J. F. Sullivan of San Francisco.

Mrs. Grace Hickox has invited the members of the Arts club and their guests to a tea tomorrow at 4 o'clock at her studios in the Fine Arts building to meet A. R. Orage, formerly the editor of the London Journal, the New York Times, and the Chicago Tribune in connection with the Guggenheim Foundation, with whom she is at work. Receiving with Miss Hickox will be Mr. and Mrs. Russell J. Matthias, and presiding at the tea table will be Mrs. Agnes Squire Foster, Mr. Alexander F. Stevenson, Mrs. Alice Rouiller, and Mrs. Adolf Ziegler.

Those who attend the meeting opening day, Saturday, and Saturday at one of the smartest women's yearling apparel shops on South Michigan avenue will be waited upon and served by society women; for the shop has been taken over by the officers and board of directors of the new Serbian Saint Sava's Home for Orphans for the three years. Mrs. Edward A. Leight will be general manager and Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick assistant general manager.

Others who will assist and their names are: Director of finance, Mrs. James Bangs; comptroller, Mrs. Edward R. Johnson; general sales manager, Mrs. Josephine Brown; Mrs. John W. Handley; assistant sales managers, Miss Clara Lake, Mrs. John F. Jelke Jr., and Mrs. Edward Litzinger; mannequins, Miss Gene Carpenter; Mrs. William Mitchell Blair, Miss Mary Weeg, Mrs. Russell Morgan, Mrs. Lucia P. Ordway, Mrs. Harry T. Smith, Mrs. Albert Edward Wright, Mrs. Robert Stenson, and Miss Marion McCarthy; manager publicity department, Mrs. Wayne Clark-Taylor; manager advertising department, Mr. Eric Gerstenberg; director of fittings, Mrs. Perry Smith; Johnstone; managers service department, Mrs. George H. Taylor and Mrs. George W. Dixon; manager order made department, Mrs. Charles Pope; manager credit department, Mrs. William A. Tager; manager auditing department, Mrs. Claude C. Hopkins; cashier, Mrs. William E. Clegg; managers alteration department, Mrs. Edward Beck and Miss Grace Beck; manager tailoring department, Mrs. Charles S. Peterson; manager shipping department, Mrs. Ernest Salmon; assistant directors of fittings, Mrs. Tracy C. Dred and Mrs. Chauncy E. Blair; managers millinery department, Mrs. William F. Jurgens and Mrs. Paul Juergens; managers lingerie and accessories department, Mrs. Thomas Warren Everett; Mrs. George Jaeger, Miss Anne Washington, Miss Florence Harlan, Mrs. Richard R. Barnitz, and Mrs. Samuel Newton.

Mrs. Robert E. Hunter will open her residence in Pasadena today, and tomorrow for a Chicago Woman's Exchange sale. Another sale will be held next Tuesday and Wednesday at the Samarkand hotel, Santa Barbara.

Mrs. George W. Dixon of 1250 Lake Shore Drive, will entertain at luncheon yesterday at the Women's Athletic club for Lady Thornton, who with her husband, Sir Henry Thornton, is spending several days in Chicago.

One of the most valuable donations, it could not be called a "white elephant" under any circumstances, received at the tea given for the Rumage Shop at Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick's residence Tuesday, was a portrait of a child painted on ivory by Countess Korybashi. Korybashi, Countess Korybashi painted a portrait of the late Miss Martin Wilson, who was one of the most active in starting the shop for the benefit of the Children's Memorial hospital, a year or two ago, and she did the child's portrait to be sold at the shop as a memorial to Miss Wilson.

Frances F. and if the favorite neckwear of the times is striped, who are we to line ourselves up counter to the tendencies of fashion? This was the decision we arrived at after hours of strolling around looking for something, and there are certainly plenty of them.

We noticed that yellow and red or orange and red are being played to quite an extent. The colors that are to be the order of the day with the well dressed men. One striped tie of yellow, red, and black we saw worn with a black and white striped shirt, self-collar and horizontally striped and dark gray suit. Another was of grayish blue, yellow and maroon narrow stripes. Orange, blue, and gray stripes formed another of the new ties we noted. It was worn with dark blue suit and yellow and white striped shirt, with wing collar.

Teddy and his chum, Roger, went coasting one afternoon when the snow was quite deep. A half hour later they came back, covered with snow from head to foot, and looking tired. "What's the matter, boys?" I asked in surprise.

"Our bobbed ran into a snow bank," replied Teddy, breathlessly, "and it took two men to get it out—me and Ruddy!"
